The Prado and Indian Statue. The Prado, Havana's fashionable parade ground, is a long and handsome boulevard, consisting of a double promenade lined with seats, and drives on each side: it contains many small parks with fountains and statues, and in one of these, India Park, is the India Fountain, which is surmounted by the figure of an Indian girl. The fountain is of Carrara marble and was made in Rome; it was presented to the city by Count Villanueva, whose estate was here.
